Germany: 18.7 million overnight stays in July and August meant another record-breaking summer season on German campsites.

The growth in the various federal states was as follows: North Rhine-Westphalia topped the list once more with an increase of 13.29%, followed by Saarland (+13.24%) and Hamburg (+12.31%).

Rhineland-Palatinate (+5.65%), Lower Saxony (+4.60%) and Hesse (+4.18%) all welcomed more campers in 2025. The biggest drop was in Berlin (-16.84%) followed by Saxony-Anhalt (-5.31%) and Bavaria (-3.86%), which, among other things, could have been caused by regional weather conditions and the high number of bookings registered the previous year.

Netherlands: The very first toll motorway in the Netherlands has been in operation to the west of Rotterdam for a year now. This 4.2 km stretch links the A20 at Vlaardingen with the A15 at Rozenburg. Private cars, vans and motorbikes pay 1.51€ per journey up to 3.5 tonnes, electric vehicles up to 4.25 tonnes. The toll for HGVs and all heavy vehicles is 9.13€.

There is no extra charge for trailers and caravans. Signs indicate that the stretch ahead is subject to toll payments so that drivers have the time to find an alternative toll-free route. From 1 January 2026 toll charges will be inflation adjusted annually.

One can pay the toll seven days in advance and up to 72 hours beforehand by logging on to the website of the electronic toll system, e-tol.

Driving your caravan in winter

For greater safety: People who feel they cannot live through the winter without their caravan should make sure they are well prepared. Driving with a trailer requires heightened attention in any case, but wintery conditions on the roads clearly make extra demands on the driver and his outfit. So it is vital to take precautionary measures, understand key issues and rigorously apply them.

The right tyres

It is certainly recommended not to drive one's caravan on summer tyres in the winter. The best tyres are all season tyres with the M+S (mud and snow) mark, or better still fit special winter tyres. These ensure better stability, better road-holding on bends and therefore safer handling generally on flat, snowy or icy roads.

Whatever tyres you have, you should regularly check the tread and tyre pressure. Look out for irregular wear or cracks especially if you do decide to continue using summer tyres.

Adapt your style of driving to prevailing weather conditions

When towing a caravan in winter, caution is the byword! Rapidly changing weather, sudden banks of fog, slippery roads and snow flurries all require your maximum concentration. Always accelerate gently and avoid abrupt steering movements. Maintain a longer safety distance from the vehicle in front, look ahead and adapt your speed to the prevailing road conditions. Adopting a calm driving style will avoid dangerous situations for you and others and don't forget that your outfit behaves more sluggishly in ice and snow and is less predictable than usual.

Rust and frost: check your brake cables

The braking system suffers a lot in winter if moisture affects the Bowden cables and they freeze up. Hang the Bowden cables up in the middle as high as possible so that water cannot accumulate. Modern long-life Bowden cables are ideal as moisture does not accumulate.

The appearance of white rust on your outfit's galvanized chassis parts is inevitable thanks to the damp and salt but will not cause fundamental damage. Simply wash the salt off with water and clean off affected areas with a brush once your winter driving is over.

Braking distance: Take the extra distance into account

In snowy conditions a towing vehicle‘s braking distance can increase fourfold – and added to that is the weight of the trailer. Therefore it is better to err on the side of caution when calculating speed and distance. Modern trailers have a so-called overrun brake. Make sure that the caravan’s braking system is regularly serviced and adjusted. Self-adjusting brakes are helpful because they automatically adjust and work out the service life of a wheel brake and ensure a brake’s optimum performance. The braking distance is thus reduced by up to five meters – in winter that is a definite safety feature.

Greater stability: The right trailer coupling

Only if winter tyres on trailers are not mandatory is it worth investing in more technology for greater stability in one’s outfit. Special anti-snaking couplings are strongly recommended. They actively address the trailer‘s dreaded swaying and snaking problem, using four friction pads to contain the movement on the trailer coupling. If you suddenly come across a patch of black ice, these couplings definitely give greater control.

But don’t forget you need to protect the trailer coupling with de-icer spray before the first frost of the winter which will ensure that the safety indicators do not seize up. If your outfit is likely to be stationary for a long time, it is worthwhile investing in a water-resistant, breathable protective cover to prevent mechanical parts and indicators from freezing.

Useful tips – for campers too

If a room or enclosed space smells musty or stale – simply fill a thin cotton bag (permeable to air) with vanilla pods and hang it up – the air will smell sweet once more!

Orange peel also provides a pleasant aroma. Leave a glass out containing strips of peel and a few cloves - your home will soon take on a pleasant wintery fragrance.

When your microwave gets greasy and dirty, clean it by placing a dish of water with a few drops of vinegar in it and heat until steam rises. Wait a while and then wipe out the inside with a cloth.

Trans-African Highway – the road network of the future

This is a project for a road network of some 6,300 km. The plan is for this mega highway to link all the continental states in Africa together at some future date, making cross-border trade and mobility much simpler throughout the African continent.

Health

High blood pressure often results from people not moving enough. We tend to stay sitting down for far too long so it helps if you stand up and move out of your chair for a short time around 25 times a day (especially recommended for people who work in an office). One study found that the diastolic blood pressure reading (the bottom one) reduced by 2.24 mmHg while the systolic level only dropped slightly.

Healthy bones are important and one's bones need 1000mg of minerals every day. Research has shown that the trace element silicium (millet/sorghum and oatmeal) boosts the accumulation of calcium in one's body. Vitamins K2 and D3 also contribute to maintaining healthy bones.

Curious facts/Environment/Culture

The laziest animal in the world is not the sloth but the koala that is native to Australia! It needs between 18 and 22 hours sleep every day in order to digest its exclusive diet of tough eucalyptus leaves. Walruses sleep for 19 hours, lions and tigers for 18 to 20 hours and crocodiles 17 hours. The sloth, on the other hand, makes do with just ten hours.

Carl Fabergé's legendary "Winter Egg" has been sold for 26 million euros at auction in London. Made of rock crystal and encrusted with 4,500 diamonds, it used to belong to the family of the Tzar of Russia.

The coldest place ever in the world was recorded at the south pole in 1982 (“Amundsen-Scott South Pole Research Station”) where the temperature was -82.8°C.

Where does the trade name Nivea come from? It stems from the Latin words “nix” or “nivis” for snow, so the name Nivea means snow-white. This cream in a blue tin is a true worldwide classic and was first developed in Hamburg in 1911.

The cathedral St. Michael and St. Gudule in Brussels is celebrating its 800th anniversary in the context of the Gudula 2026 Year with special laser shows on 30-31 January and 5, 6, 7 February 2026. Tickets (45.00€) can be bought in advance on-line. The Luminescence Show lasts approx. 45 minutes and is backed by an orchestra and choir.

Motto for 2026
